For Nyungar, any one place may be called a number of different names by different people at different times of the year. For example, some Nyungar refer to Kings Park as Karra katta or the hill of the spiders, Yongariny or place for catching kangaroo, Geenunginy Bo or the place for looking a long way and Karlkarniny or by fire place sitting. All of these places are equally correct - it depends on the context in which they are being used, and by whom. By accepting European cartographic conventions unproblematically, we run the risk of misrepresenting or making too simple our understanding of Nyungar sites and land use. ... European maps are usually set out in such a way as to imply that places have fixed names over time, that one place has only one 'true' name and that people share a consensus of meaning about one place. ... Western cartographic conventions reflect the importance of making boundaries to function as markers to exclude others and demonstrate individual ownership and control. For Nyungar, talking about one place as if it exists in isolation is akin to talking about people as if they exist in isolation from their community. The same place may have many names according to who is using it, for what purpose and at what time of the year. Women and men may have different uses for the same place, or several events may have occurred in a place, resulting in it having several names. Also, if the name is descriptive, for example, dark or black water, the same name might occur in several places - wherever dark water is found.

Among other surveying instructions issued [in times of early settlement), probably the most significant was the provision in respect of nomenclature. All known names of lakes, were to be noted down and wherever "euphonious Native names" could be ascertained they were to be retained (Tyman, 1976). The Aborigines, always closely associated with the land, had given many lakes distinctive names. An impression of how they were using the wetlands and the surrounding countryside at the time of European contact, or how the lakes fitted into their patterns of traditional land-use, may sometimes be gained from the original titles; the following interpretation is given for Lake Yangebup. The name "Yangebup" (first recorded by the surveyor F. F. Monaghan in 1888) may be derived from "Yanget" or "Yanjidi", the Aboriginal names for the edible root of a species of bulrush (Typha orientalis... A number of other lakes also have Aboriginal names ending in "up" (e.g. Lake Joondalup, Lake Jandabup); this denotes a camping place. Aboriginal names were to be accurately recorded and special care taken to discover their correct pronunciation. However, problems of linguistics are frequently encountered during the interpretation of Aboriginal words. The Aborigines had no written language, consequently Aboriginal words are spelt in various ways of different authors (e.g. documented forms of the spelling of the Aboriginal name for Bibra Lake are "Wallubup", "Walliabup", "Walyerbup" and "Walyubup"). A 'Descriptive Vocabulary', giving the meanings of many Aboriginal words was compiled by G. F. Moore in 1842, however, interpretation is still difficult due to inconsistencies arising through the existence of a large number of different dialects.

Noongar placenames, by Pat Forster, 2018, 41cm x 29cm.

The quilt shows locations of places that Noongar people named before European settlement, near Derbal Yaragan (Swan) and Dyarlgarro (Canning) Rivers, as far North as Ngoorgenboro (Herdsman Lake), West as Walyalup (Fremantle), South and East as far as Jandakot (Forrestdale Lake).

The locations for Noongar names:

- that have been retained for official use today and that are in approximately the same area as used before settlement, are shown with gold sequins
- that have been replaced are shown with white sequins.

Places that had Noongar names and that have been destroyed are shown with black sequins—lakes that have been filled in for housing, and a point (Walyubup, Point Willis) near Fremantle that was dredged to make way for the Fremantle Harbour development. Many of the places shown with white sequins have also been severely modified, for example, lakes partially filled in for housing or roads.

The placenames and meanings are listed in the next section of this document.

Orange represents the colour of the land at sunset, dark brown/black the darkness of water at sunset.

Tabulated placenames

Aboriginal place names in the tables that follow include Noongar names recorded as being in use before European settlement, many of which are now called by European names conferred by settlers, and place names derived from Aboriginal words and conferred since settlement. The sources of the names are referenced. There is no claim the lists are complete or accurate. Presumably there are also other Aboriginal place names that are no longer known or that I have not identified, for places that have European names and for places that are no longer named.

The tables show place names: along the Swan river to Guildford, along the Canning River to Riverton Bridge; and in some inland areas (away from the rivers) in Perth, including the City of Cockburn and City of Wanneroo.

The organisation of the tables takes into account Lyons (1833) observation that:

... the banks of the river beyond the flats [Matta Geru, Point Fraser] have few or no particular names. The reason is obvious. Above this point, the river being narrow and deep, is of no service to a people who know nothing of navigation. But below this, particularly on the shores of Melville Water, where the water is, to a great extent on either side of the broad channel, not more than knee or thigh deep, it is admirably adapted to spear fishing; and consequently every bay and promontory is of the utmost consequence to a people so much dependent upon fishing as well as hunting.

From Market Street [Fremantle] a sandbar called Willis Point, covered in small bushes and rushes, extended about half a kilometre into the river, leaving a narrow but deep channel near where C Shed stands today. The slowing of the river waters by a rocky bar across the entrance resulted in the formation of a sand bank or promontory known as Willis Point and greatly restricted water access to the channel. In most places the bar was less than 2 metres below the surface. Willis Point and the rocky bar had to be removed before the inner harbour could be built.

Swan River – View from Fraser's Point, Frederick Garling, 1827, Art Gallery of Western Australia
This painting from 1827 is reflective of how Perth was idealized in its beginnings, where descriptions of Swan River were inaccurate and topographical features dramatized.

Table 9. Placenames, existing Perth swamps and lakes

Noongar	Description	Existing
{1} Jooalbub	Meaning uncertain. Jualba means associated with the season of the spring. Sold to James	Lake Jualbup
Jualbup	Dyson in 1854. Became known as Dysons Swamp. Name change to Lake Jualbup in 1996	in Shenton
	[5]	Park
{2} Ngoorgenboro	[1] The place where nyungars catch birds (black duck's) and collect eggs with other food	Lake
	sources.	Herdsman
Ngoogenbiro	[2] Large lake behind Monger's Formerly known as Great Lake. The largest of the lakes. It has retained much of its former shape, although most of its interior is swamp rather than permanent water. [4]
{3} Galup	Home fires or camp [1]	Lake Monger Formerly known as Triangle Lake. The second-largest remaining lake. Much of the area of the lake was reclaimed for residential development, as well as Leederville Oval. [4]
Goobabbilup	Yalunga's camping ground at Lake Monger [1]
{4} Danjanberup	Formerley known as Three Island Lake. A small suburban lake located between Beatty	Smith's Lake Park and Charles Veryard Reserve in North Perth. The area was originally owned by the Gooey family who operated a market garden near the site, before it was resumed by the Perth City Council in 1959, and was drained and subdivided for industrial and residential use. The lake was reduced to approximately 1/30 of its original size. [4] {5} Boojamooling	Formerly known as Third Swamp. Hyde Park is located on the site of Third Swamp, and	Hyde Park still contains two lakes that were originally part of the Perth Wetlands, but were unable to	Lakes be drained due to their depth of 2 metres (6 ft 7 in). [4]
Boodjamooling	Earth-ground where it looks like a nose egging takes place, referring to the initiation of young men [2]
{5} Goongoongup	[3]	Claise Brook
	Claisebrook Cove; formerly known as Clause's Lagoon. A small inlet of the Swan River located in East Perth south of the Graham Farmer Freeway. Claise Brook was a free-flowing seasonal brook, dry in summer and flooding in winter, up until the 1990s, until it was reclaimed for development. However, in recent years, the brook has been refurnished, and is now a much smaller still body of water known as Claisebrook Cove. A small footbridge known as Trafalgar Bridge crosses over it. [4]
	Goongoongup Railway Bridge is near to Claisebrook Cove	Goongoongup Bridge
{6} Warndoolier	A small tidal inlet of the Swan River located in Banks Reserve, Mt Lawley, originally named	Walter's by Governor James Stirling after his older brother Walter. The brook originally flowed	Brook much further inland, and was located to the north of an open swamp, near the site of the present-day East Perth railway station. The Mount Lawley Main Drain is located at Walter's Brook, and formerly supplied stormwater to Walter's Brook Engine House at East Perth Power Station. [4]

Swan River, preparing to encamp for the night, 35 miles up, 1827 Frederick Garling, artist on the Success. Watercolour painting. State Art Collection, Art Gallery of Western Australia

Accessed in Cradle of the Colony exhibition brochure, Swan Valley Visitors Centre at swan river colony - Swan Valley

Captain Stirling [of the Success] and his exploratory party were able to travel to the confluence of the Swan River and Ellen Brook in March 1827. They were hindered from travelling any further upstream by debris and the lack of water except for a few pools in the channel. The site of Stirling's camp is marked by All Saints Church.

Pencil sketch, No title, no date. In 1827, Captain James Stirling explored the Swan River with a view to establishing a colony there. The drawing Swan River c.1829 depicts the area where Stirling's party camped overnight during their expedition. It was made in London as a basis for the woodengraving, Swan River 1830. https://nga.gov.au/Exhibition/OUTWEST/Default.cfm?IRN=204577&MnulD=3&ViewID=2

View across the coastal plain, 1827 by Frederick Garling. State Art Collection, Art Gallery of Western Australia

This scene from the foothills [of the Darling Escarpment] illustrates an area recently burnt by a low fi re evidenced by the lack of understorey and the absence of skirts on the shorter grass trees. These Swan River Aboriginal People's land management practices led EW Landor in 1841 to state: "The whole of the middle and upper Swan resembles a vast English park".

Table 18. Placenames, districts

These divisions have no reference whatever to the territorial boundaries of the different tribes. They seem to be purely geological.

	Description
Moorda	Blue Mountains [Darling Escarpment]. The term seems to indicate darkness of colour.
Booyeembara	the division along the coast, consisting principally of lime-stone rock; and generally bearing the xanthorea. and a few of that species of the Eucalyptus, called white gum. Booyee, rock; a rock; a stone.
Gandoo	the division behind Booyeembara, and running parallel. This is a sandy division, and abounds with that species of the Eucalyptus, called Mahogany.
Warget	the division behind Gandoo, and parallel; stretching along the foot of the mountains, like the other divisions from South to North. This division abounds with clay, red loam, and alluviai plains; and, generally bears those species of the Eucalyptus, called the blue and flooded gums.
Mooro	the district of Yellowgonga, it is hounded by the sea on the West; by Melville water and the Swan, on the South; by Ellen's brook, on the East; and, by the Gyngoorda [Moore River?, Hallam 1991], on the North, Gâlup [Lake Monger] is the capital [where Yellowgonga camped]
Beeloo	the district of Monday, is bounded by the Canning on the South; by Melville water, on the West; by the Swan and Ellen's brook, on the North. The Eastern boundary of this district, I cannot accurately define. Several of the mountains are numbered in Monday's territories, and his head quarters are Wurerup [the gorge of the Swan].
	It should be remarked that the lower part of Monday's district, near where the two waters meet, seems to have been conquered and taken from his people at some former period; and now forms a sort of neutral, or common ground, on which all the tribes to the North and South of the river occasionally meet.
B eeliar	the district of Midjegoorong, is bounded by Melville water and the Canning, on the North; by the mountains on the East; by the sea on the West; and by a line, due East, from Mangles bay, on the South. His head quarters are Mendyarrup, situated some where in Gaudoo. Here I ought to observe that Yagan is not a chief. But, being the son of Midjegoorong, he must be ranked among the princes of the country. He has greatly distinguished himself as a patriot and a warrior.
	the district of Banyowla, chief of the Murray tribe, comes next; and is bounded on the West, by the sea; on the East, by the mountains ; on the North by Beeliar ; and, on the South, by a line parallel to his Northern boundary. Banyowla possesses both banks of the Murray.
	the next chief is Dygan; and the next to him Beenan; whose districts probably extend as far as Cape Leuwin to the North of Yellowgonga, is Waylo, chief of a tribe on the Boora, commonly called Lennard's brook.
	to the North and next to Waylo is Byerman, chief on the Bookal and the Mooler [lakes in the North]. Byerman is either the brother or particular friend of Yellowgonga.
	to the Eastward, and somewhere in the mountains, on the way to York, is a chief of the name of Dyoolon; and it is not impossible but that Dyoolon may be the chief on the Avon, near Mount Mackie
Bargo	Still further to the East, is Wulbaboog; cliief of a district called Bargo
Derbal	This name comprehends the whole of the country from the Murray to the Gyngoorda [Gingin Brook?].
Barnett	The name of the country to the south of the Murray, including Geographe Bay
Knoobar	The country to the north of the Gynoorda.
